

Announcing The LOGIS News/Blog

LOGIS is always looking for new ways to be of value to our members. One of the ways we are pursuing this is to improve communication between LOGIS and its user community. To that end, we have created the LOGIS Blog.

The word “blog” is a contraction of the words “web log.” Like most blogs, the LOGIS Blog is a web site that provides short, to the point articles about various subjects. In the case of our blog, we will be providing information and news about our applications and services.

Articles will be posted on a regular schedule each week, appearing first on Mondays. The schedule will be as follows:

First Week of Month:

- Network Services (including Internet and IP Telephony)

Second Week of Month:

- Utility Billing (UB)
- Property Data / Special Assessments (PDS/SA)
- Permits and Inspection Management (PIMS/cs)
- Parks and Recreation (Class)
- Pets Under Police Supervision (PUPs)

Third Week of Month:

- Public Safety (CAD, Records, Mobiles)

Fourth Week of Month:

- JD Edwards (Financial, Human Resources, CAM)
- Geographic Information Systems (GIS)

One of the great things about a blog is that you can “subscribe” to it. When you subscribe, new blog articles are automatically sent to you through email. You don’t have to remember to check the blog site every now and then for new material. To subscribe to or read the LOGIS Blog, open your web browser and go to:

<http://thelogisblog.wordpress.com>

To subscribe, look for the item titled “Email Subscription” in the upper right of the blog web page. Please take a moment to sign up and stay well-informed about LOGIS.